

School Food Rules and Film Script:

In our school canteen there isn't a very large selection of foods, especially healthy foods but it's not bad either. We have to pay for our food and can get whatever we like. The main foods are the chicken fillet roll, sausage roll, and chicken wraps. They also offer popcorn and a selection of chocolate bars. We don't have carbonated drinks so water is what I usually get. There is also some fruit available but it's not usually bought.

The same food is available for both students and teachers. Teachers don't get much food from the school, usually bring food.

There are a few eating rules in our school. We can eat everywhere except on the middle floor of the school. We are only allowed eat during our lunch times. The only other eating rule that we have is that we are not allowed eat in class. You're responsible for your rubbish. There are no sanctions for breaking these rules except possibly being given out to or having to throw the food in the bin.

If we were to improve the school rules related to eating I would allow for people to eat anywhere because it would prevent overcrowding in our canteen area.

Film Script:

Begins with someone working in a kitchen. A student walks up and asks for a healthy food. Not available. They ask for another healthy option. Not available. They ask for one more healthy option. Not available. Another student walks up and asks for an unhealthy option. They get it immediately.

The student gets an unhealthy option instead. They go up to the first floor and begin eating. Someone walks up to them and points at a sign that says no eating. This person is forced downstairs. In the time it takes for this to happen, the bell rings and lunch is over.

Annoyed, the student goes to class. They decide to eat their food in class. The teacher catches them, gives out to them and forces them to bin the food.

Hansel and Gretel use breadcrumbs to mark their way back home when being led by their father into the middle of the woods. They come across a house made of candy. A witch lives in the house. Using candies, cakes and other unhealthy foods, she attempts to fatten Hansel up to eat him. Hansel and Gretel realise this and kill the witch. In Snow White, the witch attempts to kill Snow White. She does this by giving Snow White a poisoned apple.
